WHAT HAPPENED

Her lowest paper of the year, and the reason is specific rather than general. Bab 3(ب) had not been taught in class and she had held the notes for a single day, but the marks did not go on comprehension. They went on detail: names, numbers and references that were printed in her own notes and simply were not reproduced.

The single clearest fact on the paper: across six pages, on three questions that ask for a reference in the question text, and against a key carrying five hadith and Quran references, she wrote none at all. Not one.

MCQs fell from 9/10 on exam-03 to 6/10. She left nothing blank, so that instruction landed. But item (ii) she demonstrably knew, having written the same content correctly a page earlier, and items (vii) and (viii) look like an exact transposition of two answers she had right.

WHERE MARKS WENT

Item	Marks	What happened
MCQs (ii), (vi), (vii), (viii)	4.0	(ii) she knew and wrote correctly in Section B a page earlier; (vii) and (viii) look like an exact transposition; (viii) is the 40 km item re-set for her, answered as 20 km.
Q.2(iii), respect for women	2.5	Answered what Islam gave women instead of the steps we should take. None of the book five printed items, and no closing reason.
Q.2(ii), two daughters	2.0	A different hadith from the same page. The two-finger gesture, which is the heart of the answer, is absent.
Q.3, andaz-e-tarbiyat	4.5	Six correct headings, one sentence each, no example, name or reference. Three of the book eight methods missing entirely.
Q.4, Ghazwa-e-Hunain	3.5	Strong narrative, but four of the eighteen priced specifics. No 40 km, no ghanimat figures, no ayah reference.
Q.2(i), Fatima RA	0.5	All four actions present. Missing hawala, priced at half a mark per the paper rule.

Q.4 on Ghazwa-e-Hunain is the good news and should be read first. A page and a half, her own headings, twelve substantive statements, six numbered lessons and a written conclusion, all factually correct and correctly sequenced. She even named Malik bin Auf as the Hawazin chief, which is not printed in her book. On form, the thin-answer habit is genuinely broken here. On substance it is not: of the eighteen specifics the question priced, she wrote four.

Q.3 is where the habit is untouched. Six correctly named methods, one sentence under each, no example, no incident, no name and no reference anywhere. The question asked in its own bracket for each method with its example and reference, and instruction 5 repeated it in Roman Urdu.

And the finding that ties the paper together: the three methods missing from Q.3 (Anas RA's ten years, jawami ul kalim, and tadrij with Muadh RA) are exactly the three MCQs (v), (vi) and (vii) sitting in the same stretch, two of which she got wrong. One gap in preparation, the second half of the andaz-e-tarbiyat lesson, showing up twice.
